Gov. Sununu creates Special Education Provider Fund

Governor Chris Sununu announced the creation of the Special Education Provider Fund, which will provide $4 million for services for special needs students across New Hampshire.

“Private providers are an essential part of our special education system, and our public schools rely on them to meet their responsibilities to our most vulnerable students,” said Sununu. “But because of their status as private companies, these special education providers had not be eligible for previous programs funded through the CARES Act. The Special Education Provider Fund will fill that gap, and ensure that New Hampshire students with disabilities are receiving the services they deserve.”
